

Heart Disease Kills Suddenly,

but never without fair warning. By an occasional fluttering, a perceptible palpitation, shortness of breath, etc., in many ways the victim fully notified. But his friends are ignorant, and the warning is disregarded until loving associates are shocked and dazed by another sudden death.

"My wife suffered years with heart trouble which the doctors called incurable valvular contraction of the heart. She took a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure six months ago, and has now suffered since. She sleeps well, and is like a new person altogether, and says Dr. Miles' Remedies are gold to her."—F. B. JACKSON, 701 S. 27th St., Omaha, Neb. SWIFT YACHT'S MISSION

GOING TO RESCUE A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL.

King of Bunco Steerers—Dashing Detail—New California—Handsome Craft May Call at This Port.

NEW YORK.—The Herald says: It is asserted on excellent authority that the friends of "Tom" O'Brien of New York, better known as the "king of bunco steerers," have perfected a plan for his liberation from the French penal settlement of New Caledonia, to which he was transported for life last March, after being convicted at Paris of the murder of his one-time partner and brother in swindles, "Kid" Waddell. The friends of the bunco man have invented a scheme of rescue and perfected its details, and their boast is they will have O'Brien inhaling deep breaths of the air of freedom before the leaves begin to fall.

Within a few days, it is said, a large steam yacht, carrying ample supplies for an intended cruise, will leave San Francisco for the South Pacific. She will carry a picked crew, selected for their supreme indifference to any considerations but those of boodle. Their apparent destination will be Sydney, Australia, and the "gentlemen" who embark on her as passengers will be known as rich New Yorkers, off for a pleasure jaunt.

The yacht it is said, will carry a crew of seventy men, each of whom has been promised a handsome bonus in the event of a successful termination of the voyage. She is heavily armed and prepared to make a fierce bluff if the occasion should arise for such action. Four noted crooks will occupy the yacht's saloon. The only man in their confidence is the captain, who will receive $5000 when O'Brien is safely landed. The names of these four passengers have, of course, not been trumpeted abroad, but it is understood that one of them hails from this city. All of them are resolute men who would stop at nothing to attain the desired end. The captain is unfavorably known as one of the stiffest sea martinet on the Pacific Coast, and he selected the crew himself.

The plan of operations is very simple. It has been ascertained that O'Brien had been put to work in one of the convict tobacco plantations not far from Noumea, the capital of the island. The yacht will come to anchor a couple of miles off the coast and the "king" will be apprised of this fact at once by agents who have been heavily bribed for the service. Signals will be made which will be satisfactorily accounted for by these agents to the authorities in the event of embarrassing questions being asked. The rescue is fixed to take place any night thereafter when the conditions are suitable.

O'Brien is confined in a one-story dormitory with other members of the gang in which he labors under the broiling southern sun. Sentries patrol the enclosure in which these dormitories are situated the whole night long. The inclosure consists of a high fence, practically unscalable by a man unaided from without. Even if he succeeded in getting into the yard in which the sentries are posted the would-be fugitive must surely be discovered and shot before he could reach the fence.

It is said, however, that the "king" of bunco steerers has nearly succeeded in digging his way to freedom. The story goes that he has, assisted, of course, by those who know the secret, scooped out a passage-way through the unused and dilapidated cellar under his prison house to a point outside the fence which encloses the barracks.

As soon as he emerges from his home, if he ever does emerge, he will be met by guides, who will conduct him to the shore, where the yacht's boat will be in waiting. If O'Brien ever reaches the boat, manned by his powerful oarsmen, his safety will be assured.

THEIR HONEYMOON.

TROUBLES OF A YOUNG WOMAN WHO MARRIED A DOCTOR.

He Was So Afraid of Microbes That They Were Continually Being Guarded Against—Wouldn't Allow Her to Wear the Pretty Gown.

Young Mrs. Boggs heaved a deep sigh as she handed her dainty pink and white cup across the little tea table to her bosom friend, Mrs. Tablets, for "just one more lump of sugar," and helped herself to another wafer.

Mrs. Tablets started. "My dearest Laura," she exclaimed, "what can such a heartrending sigh mean on the lips of a bride but just returned from her honeymoon?"

"I do not mind admitting to you, dear Marie," said Mrs. Boggs, putting her now empty cup upon the table, "that I have already found out that the fate of a doctor's wife is not in all respects an enviable one."

"Why, Laura, what do you mean? You can as yet have had no experience of interrupted dinners, midnight calls and bad bills."

"As you know, dear Marie," replied young Mrs. Boggs, "we started immediately after our wedding for Chicago, and my first trial began the very evening of our arrival. We reached the hotel about 9 o'clock to find that instead of the fine suit of rooms we had engaged only one rather shabby bedchamber had been saved for us. Of course it was too late to change our quarters that evening, even supposing that we could do better at one of the other hotels. I felt very dusty and made up my mind that a nice warm bath was the thing needed, and so I rang the bell and ordered one prepared. Upon hearing the order, Mr. Boggs turned to me with a look of horror upon his face.

"Do you mean to say," he cried, "that you would actually take a bath in a public tub in which anybody who pays a few cents can bathe?"

"Certainly," I replied, "when I have not a private one. I must keep clean."

"Laura," cried the doctor, "do you not know that a number of dreadful diseases may be communicated in that very way? You really will have to countermand the order. I am very sorry to disappoint you, but not for thousands of dollars would I have you run such a risk."

"And so of course I had to give up my much coveted bath."

"Poor Laura," said Mrs. Tablets, a very little smile of amusement curling the corner of her mouth. But Mrs. Boggs did not see it and continued sadly:

"Most people had trouble in getting their luggage, and we were among the unfortunate in that regard, but I consoled myself with the idea that the next day I could easily go to one of the dry goods shops and buy some clean clothes. I shall not mind the inconvenience at all," I remarked cheerfully to William, "because, you know, I can try them on and be sure that they fit nicely." Alas, poor little me! I seemed destined to shock what I call his prejudices.

"Of course you must be joking," he cried. But I assured him I was never more serious in my life. Then he looked actually grieved at my ignorance and remarked that shopkeepers who allowed undergarments to be tried on ought to be subject to arrest and fine, if not actually to imprisonment. Of course none but thoughtless, careless persons would dream of wearing ready made underclothes until they had been laundered, considering the fact that they are commonly made in tenement houses full of dirt and bacteria, but to actually go to a shop where people were allowed to try on such garments, thus propagating disgusting skin diseases, one must be simply mad.

"Of course I was very angry at being called mad, and then there we had our first quarrel."

"You might have supposed that this would be a lesson to him not to interfere with my personal liberty, but not at all. Hardly two weeks had passed when one chilly morning, when we were going to breakfast in the little sitting room which we had finally secured, I slipped on a lovely wadded Japanese wrapper of pale blue silk most elaborately embroidered in canary colored floss, and as I took a last glance at myself before leaving my bedroom I felt that I looked very nice indeed.

"When I appeared at the breakfast table, however, I saw a shade of displeasure cross my husband's face as he looked with marked disapproval at my pretty wrapper."

"Laura," he said very seriously, "have you ever worn that gown before?"

"No," I answered, wondering what was coming next.

"Then do me the favor to take it off and never put it on again. Yes, my dear, I know it is exceedingly pretty, but as likely as not the person who worked all that elaborate embroidery was a leper or the victim of some cutaneous disorder. Those orientals are so prone to such diseases, and I cannot allow you to run the risk of wearing the garment, rich and comfortable as it is."

"Of course after that I could never take any pleasure in the dress, even if he had not absolutely forbidden my wearing it. I was so disappointed that I cried as I changed it for a plain American tea gown of cashmere."

"In early September we went to the mountains for a couple of weeks. We were at such a nice hotel! One of the first things that charmed me was the fact that every evening we found in our room a nice pitcher of ice water. The doctor had ascertained shortly after our arrival that the water was safe to drink, and I was enjoying a glass of it in my room one evening, when William entered and said:

"You are not drinking water with ice in it, I trust."

"Upon my replying that I was, he asked if no one had ever explained to me the danger of ice in country places. 'Of course,' he added, 'ice is not easy to procure in sufficient quantities to last all summer for a large hotel, and so they take any ice they can find, and much of it comes from ponds of stagnant water. Many cases of typhoid fever can be directly traced to the drinking of ice water made from such ice. The latter of course melts very quickly, and so it is as if you were drinking the unhealthy, stagnant water direct.'"

"From day to day I found that on various pretexts most of the luxuries of life were being cut off one by one. There was some plausible hygienic reason to urge in every instance. When we went to New York, we spent a great deal on cab hire, because William objected to my sitting next to dirty and possibly unhealthy people in the horse cars. Save for the expense, I was resigned to that restriction. But, my dear, if you ever marry again, I strongly urge you to select a husband from some profession other than that of medicine."—Washington Star.

"Style" in Furniture

It is equally as poor taste to buy "out-of-date" Furniture as an "out-of-date" Bonnet or Wrap. We have the advantage of all others in having the only absolutely new and "up-to-date" stock of Furniture exhibited in Honolulu—and yet we ask less than you pay for the old elsewhere.

In Oak or Birch are selected by people whose tastes run to the refined or elegant. For room decoration as well as for service there is a certain elegance and richness about these woods, not found in any other, and yet the prices are not what you would imagine them to be. Birch sets, with dressing cases having cheval plate mirrors, are preferred by ladies, because the long glass allows them a view of the full figure. The old fashioned large, square glass is quite as fashionable and as much in demand because the bureau to which they are attached give larger space for clothing.

We have them in all styles and in modern designs. Price, from $25 to $100.

Bedroom Suits.

Chiffoniers.

In these days when the ladies require many changes of clothing, there is a demand for space in which to put things away. The bureau drawers are crowded. A Chiffonier is necessary in every house where store room is scarce. These are made nowadays for gentlemen as well as ladies; some have a drop lid which unfolds to the gaze a regular receptacle for pens, ink, paper and other articles of stationery.

China Closets.

There is scarcely a family in Honolulu, or anywhere else on the Islands, who has not a few choice bits of china stowed away in out of the way places. Give them light—let your friends see them.

China Closets in oak are the proper thing, and a dining room is not complete without one—the price has been an obstacle in the past, but over-production by a leading furniture maker in the States has helped us to offer them to you at ridiculously low prices. See those with the oval glass. Prices range from $20 to $45.

Secretary Book Cases.

Wall pockets and shelves for books are out of date; fashion demands something more modern and more artistic in design.

Side Boards.

Nothing sets off a dining room to more advantage, or adds to its convenience more than a Side Board. No dining room is complete without one. We have them to suit all tastes and purses.
